CAMPUS POLICE AND SECURITY PROGRAMS
CAS Contextual Statement

The issue of crime on American college and university campuses has been around since at least the early 19th century when a series of student disruptions rocked the campuses of a number of colleges (Gregory, 2001). The image of campus crime in recent years is in stark relief to former impressions due to high-profile incidents on campus, the perception that institutions were hiding campus crime (Gregory, 2002), and suggestions that university officials needed to take more responsibility for the safety of their students (Bickel & Lake, 1999).

Campus Police and Security refers to that agency and those individuals who, either as employees of the institution or through some sort of contracted service, provide for a safer campus environment, protect members of the university community, and may enforce institutional policy and relevant laws and codes. There are a wide variety of arrangements on college and university campuses in the United States and Canada by which these services are provided. These may include "sworn" police agencies at public institutions that are operated as any municipal, state, or province police agency may be and in which officers are trained similarly. On some independent institution campuses, the agency may operate under state or provincial law as "company police" or "special deputies" who have law enforcement authority but whose authority is limited to the campus itself. Some institutions contract with local law enforcement agencies to provide services within the borders of the campus, hire private security companies to protect the institution, or employ their own security officers who do not have arrest authority. Finally, some institutions use a combination of these methods to provide services on and around campus.

In the United States, all campus police and security programs operating on university campuses that receive federal funds must adhere to the Jeanne Clery Disclosure of Campus Security Policy and Campus Crime Statistics Act (2000). This federal law, originally passed in 1990, requires the reporting of campus crime statistics in certain categories, includes reporting on campus fire safety, requires the provision of certain information about campus policies, and has a number of other requirements with which university officials must comply. In 2014, the law was amended to add stalking, dating violence and domestic violence to the list of reportable crimes, and clarifies the definitions of several crimes. In addition, all U.S. states and Canadian provinces have laws and regulations that control how and under what types of arrangements campus police and security may operate.

The United States Department of Education has responsibility for enforcement of the Clery Act (http://www2.ed.gov/admins/lead/safety/campus.html), may fine institutions for violation of the Act, and in extreme cases may remove the authority of institutions to receive federal funds. The U.S. Department of Education also provides a great deal of information to assist university authorities to make their campuses safer and to comply with the Act. These include The Handbook for Campus Safety and Crime Reporting (Westat, Ward & Mann, 2011)

The family of Jeanne Clery, for whom the Clery Act is named, set up a non-profit advocacy group called Security on Campus, Inc. (2012). This group, for over twenty years, monitored compliance with the act, advocated for strict enforcement of the law, and lobbied Congress for additional laws to improve safety on American institutions of post-secondary education. While still engaged in compliance and lobbying efforts, the organization, which has changed its name to the Clery Center for Security on Campus, now serves primarily as an educational agency that supports institutions in their compliance efforts.

The International Association of Campus Law Enforcement Administrators (IACLEA) advances public safety for educational institutions by providing educational resources, advocacy, and professional development services. IACLEA is the leading voice for the campus public safety community.

IACLEA was created by 11 college and university security directors who met in November of 1958 at Arizona State University to discuss job challenges and mutual problems and to create a clearinghouse for information and issues shared by campus public safety directors across the country. Today, IACLEA membership represents more than 1,200 colleges and universities in 20 countries. In addition to the colleges and universities that are institutional members, IACLEA has 2,000 individual memberships held by campus law enforcement staff, criminal justice faculty members, and municipal chiefs of police" (IACLEA, 2012).

According to Fisher and Sloan (2007), "[t]he past 20 or so years ha[ve] seen key development in the context of campus security: the professionalization of the individuals and departments charged with the sometimes daunting task of reducing opportunities for on-campus victimization, responding to calls for assistance, and providing services to crime victims. The professionalization has touched almost all aspects of campus security and has resulted in significant changes in, and upgrades to, security policies" (p. 14). The authors indicated that the movement from service as a "night watchman" to the current role on many campuses of high-tech police departments, which may also have "information security and infrastructure protection" (p. 14) responsibilities, has been a dramatic role change.

Sloan and Lanier (2007) described the evolution of community policing on college and university campuses and noted other current trends that related to campus police and security policies. Bromley (2007) explained the evolution of campus police and security services in some detail and laid out his view of the modern campus police and security agency. CAS standards should guide campus police and security programs to best practices in their new roles.

INTRODUCTION AND INSTRUCTIONS
CAS Self-Assessment Guide

The Self-Assessment Guides (SAG) translate functional area CAS standards and guidelines into tools for conducting self-study. Educators can use this SAG to gain informed perspectives on the strengths and deficiencies of their programs and services as well as to plan for improvements. Grounded in the reflective, self-regulation approach to quality assurance in higher education endorsed by CAS, this SAG provides institutional, divisional, departmental, and unit leaders with a tool to assess programs and services using currently accepted standards of practice.

The Introduction outlines the self-assessment process, describes how to complete a programmatic self-study, and is organized into three sections:
   I.   Self-Assessment Guide Organization and Process
   II.   Rating Examples
   III. Formulating an Action Plan, Preparing a Report, and Closing the Loop

The introduction is followed by the Self-Assessment Worksheet, which presents the CAS standards for the functional area and incorporates a series of criterion measures for rating purposes.

I. Self-Assessment Guide and Process

CAS developed and has incorporated a number of common criteria that have relevance for each and every functional area, no matter what its primary focus. These common criteria are referred to as "General Standards," which form the core of all functional area standards. CAS standards and guidelines are organized into 12 components, and the SAG workbook corresponds with the same sections:

Part 1.	Mission	Part 7.	Diversity, Equity, and Access
Part 2.	Program	Part 8.	Internal and External Relations
Part 3.	Organization and Leadership	Part 9.	Financial Resources
Part 4.	Human Resources	Part 10.	Technology
Part 5.	Ethics	Part 11.	Facilities and Equipment
Part 6.	Law, Policy, and Governance	Part 12.	Assessment

For each set of standards and guidelines, CAS provides a Self-Assessment Guide (SAG) that includes a recommended comprehensive self-study process for program evaluation. Seven basic steps to using a SAG are suggested for implementing a functional area self-study. The following self-study process is recommended.

1. Plan the Process Map out steps for process, develop timeline, build buy-in with all stakeholders, and explicitly identify desired outcomes of the self-study	5. Develop an Action Plan Identify discrepancies, corrective action, and recommended steps (e.g., identify strengths, weaknesses, recommendations, benchmarks for achievement, resources, timeframe, and responsible individuals)
2. Assemble and Educate the Self-Assessment Team Determine who should be on the team and how to educate the team about the self-study process	6. Prepare a Report Identify audience for report(s); describe the self-study process, evidence gathering, rating process, and evaluations; summarize strengths and weaknesses; describe the action plan; and draft an executive summary
3. Identify, Collect, and Review Evidence Define what constitutes evidence; then gather, collect,	7. Close the Loop Put action plans into practice; work to navigate politics and

manage, and review evidence	secure resources; identify barriers to overcome; and build buy-in to the program review results
4. Conduct and Interpret Ratings Using Evaluative Evidence Clarify team's rating criteria; employ a process for rating [small group, individual, staff]; negotiate rating differences; and manage group ratings

The first four steps in conducting self-assessment will lead you through planning your process, preparing your team, gathering evidence, and assigning ratings to the criterion measures.

A. Plan the self-study process
B. Assemble and educate self-study team(s)
C. Identify, collect, and review documentary evidence
D. Conduct ratings using evaluative evidence

Step A: Plan the Self-Study Process
Prior to beginning a program review, division and functional area leaders need to determine the area (or areas) to be evaluated and the reasons for the project. This may be dictated by institutional program review cycles or planning for accreditation processes, or it may result from internal divisional goals and needs. Explicitly identifying desired outcomes and key audiences for a self-study will help leaders facilitate a process that makes the most sense for the project.

Critical first phases of a program review include mapping out the planned steps for a program review and developing timelines. Leaders will also want to build buy-in with stakeholders of the functional area. In the initial planning stage of the self-study process it is desirable to involve the full functional area staff, including support staff members, knowledgeable students, and faculty members when feasible. This approach provides opportunity for shared ownership in the evaluation.

Step B: Assemble and Educate the Self-Assessment Review Team
The second step is to identify an individual to coordinate the self-assessment process. CAS recommends that the coordinator be someone other than the leader of the unit under review; this facilitates honest critique by the review team and enhances credibility of the final report. Once a leader is designated, members of the institutional community [e.g., professional staff members, faculty members, students] need to be identified and invited to participate. Whether a sole functional area or a full division is to be reviewed, the self-study team will be strengthened by the inclusion of members from outside the area(s) undergoing review.

In preparing the team for the self-study, it is imperative to train the team on the CAS standards, as well as self-assessment concepts and principles. CAS standards and guidelines are formulated by representatives of 41 higher education professional associations concerned with student learning and development. The CAS standards represent essential practices; the CAS guidelines, on the other hand, are suggestions for practice and serve to elaborate and amplify standards through the use of suggestions, descriptions, and examples. Guidelines can often be employed to enhance program practice. Following a long-standing CAS precedent, the functional area standards and guidelines—presented as an appendix to the self-assessment instrument—are formatted so that standards (i.e., essentials of quality practice) are printed in bold type. Guidelines, which complement the standards, are printed in light-face type. Standards use the auxiliary verbs "must" and "shall" while guidelines use "should" and "may."

In this self-assessment instrument, the CAS standards have been translated into criterion measures and grouped into subcategories for rating purposes. The criterion measures are not designed to focus on discrete ideas; rather, the measures are designed to capture the major ideas and elements reflected in the standards. For each of the 12 component parts, team members will rate clusters of criterion measures. If the assessment team decides to incorporate one or more of the guidelines into the review process, each guideline can be similarly translated into a measurable statement to facilitate rating.

As a group, the review team should examine the standards carefully and read through the entire self-assessment guide before beginning to assign ratings. It may be desirable for the team, in collaboration with the full staff, to discuss the meaning of each standard. Through this method, differing interpretations can be examined and agreement generally reached about how the standard will be interpreted for purposes of the self-assessment.

Step C: Identify, Collect, and Review Documentary Evidence
Collecting and documenting evidence of program effectiveness is an important step in the assessment process. No self-assessment is complete without relevant data and related documentation being used. It is good practice for programs to collect and file relevant data routinely, which can then be used to document program effectiveness over time. Available documentation should be assembled by the unit under review and provided to the review team at the outset of the study. The team may request additional information as needed as the review is conducted.

Documentary evidence often used to support evaluative judgments includes:
- Student Recruitment and Marketing Materials: brochures and other sources of information about the program, participation policies and procedures, and reports about program results and participant evaluations

- Program Documents: mission statements, catalogs, brochures and other related materials, staff and student manuals, policy and procedure statements, evaluation and periodic reports, contracts, and staff memos

- Institutional Administrative Documents: statements about program purpose and philosophy relative to other educational programs, organizational charts, financial resource statements, student and staff profiles, and assessment reports

- Research, Assessment, and Evaluation Data: needs assessments, follow-up studies, program evaluations, outcome measures and methodologies, and previous self-study reports

- Staff Activity Reports: annual reports; staff member vitae; service to departments, colleges, university, and other agencies; evidence of effectiveness; scholarship activities, and contributions to the profession

- Student Activity Reports: developmental transcripts, portfolios, and other evidence of student contributions to the institution, community, and professional organizations; reports of special student accomplishments; and employer reports on student employment experiences

In the SAG, each section provides recommended evidence and documentation that should be collected and compiled prior to conducting ratings. The evidence collected is likely applicable across numerous sections.

Raters can best make judgments about the program expectations articulated in the standards when they have a variety of evidence available. Multiple forms of evidence should be reviewed and reported in the narrative section of the SAG worksheets. Through the rating process, a self-study team may identify a need to obtain additional information or documentation before proceeding, in order to lend substance to judgments about a given assessment criterion. Evidence and documentation should be appended and referenced in the final self-assessment report.

Step D: Conduct and Interpret Ratings Using Evaluative Evidence
When the program review team has gathered and reviewed necessary evidence, they will be able to assign and interpret ratings to individual criterion measures, following three steps.

1) Rate Criterion Measures
   a) Team members individually rate criterion measures based on their understanding of the evidence.
   b) Team discusses and assigns collective ratings for criterion measures.

2) Provide Narrative Rationale
   a) Document the reasoning and evidence for the rating assigned to each subsection, in the space provided for Rationale.
   b) Explain what evidence has been collected and reviewed to support individual and/or team ratings and judgments.
   c) Provide information for follow-up and relevant details about ratings (e.g., if Partly Meets is assigned as a rating, what aspects of the program or service do and do not meet which standards statements).

3) Answer Overview Questions (In the Instrument)
   a) Respond, in writing in the space provided, to the Overview Questions that immediately follow the rating section of each of the 12 components.
   b) Use answers to the Overview Questions, which are designed to stimulate summary thinking about overarching issues, to facilitate interpretation of the ratings and development of the self-study report.

Assessment criterion measures are used to judge how well areas under review meet CAS standards. These criterion measures are designed to be evaluated using a 4-point rating scale. In addition to the numerical rating options, Does Not Apply (DNA) and Insufficient Evidence/Unable to Rate (IE) ratings are provided. This rating scale is designed to estimate broadly the extent to which a given practice has been performed.

CAS CRITERION MEASURE RATING SCALE

DNA	IE	0	1	2	3
Does Not Apply	Insufficient Evidence/ Unable to Rate	Does Not Meet	Partly Meets	Meets	Exceeds

Under rare circumstances, it may be determined that a criterion measure used to judge the standard is not applicable for the particular program (e.g., a single sex or other unique institution that cannot meet a criterion measure for that reason). In such instances, raters may use a DNA rating and, in the self-study report, describe their rationale for excluding the practice in the criterion measure. The IE response can be used when relevant data are unavailable to support a judgment. When either the DNA or the IE ratings are used, an explanatory note should be provided in the report. Items rated with 0 should generate careful group consideration and appropriate follow-up action.

Program leaders may wish to incorporate additional criterion measures, such as selected CAS guidelines or other rating scales, into the procedures before the self-assessment process begins. Such practice is encouraged, and the SAG instrument can be amended to incorporate additional criterion measures for judging the program. In such instances, additional pages to accommodate the additional criterion measures may be required.

Whatever procedures are used to arrive at judgments, deliberate discussions should occur about how to initiate the rating process and select the optimal rating strategy. In such discussions, it is expected that disagreements among team members will occur and that resulting clarifications will inform all participants. It is important that the team achieve consensual resolution of such differences before proceeding with individual ratings.

CAS suggests a two-tiered (individual and group) judgment approach for determining the extent to which the program meets the CAS standard. First, the self-assessment team members (and functional area staff members, if desired) individually should rate the clusters of criterion measures using separate copies of the CAS Self-Assessment Guide. In addition, they will need to document their reasoning and evidence for the rating assigned to each subsection in the space provided for Rationale. This individualized rating procedure is then followed by a collective review and analysis of the individual ratings.

The individual ratings should be reviewed, discussed, and translated into a collective rating by the team; then the team is ready to move to the interpretation phase of the self-assessment. Interpretation typically incorporates discussion among team members to assure that all aspects of the program were given fair and impartial consideration prior to a final collective judgment. At this point, persistent disagreements over performance ratings may call for additional data collection.

After the team review is completed, a meeting with relevant administrators, staff members, and student leaders should be scheduled for a general review of the self-assessment results. The next step, including discussion of alternative approaches that might be used to strengthen and enhance the program, is to generate steps and activities to be incorporated into an action plan. This step is best done by the unit staff, informed by the results of the review and, when feasible, in consultation with the review team. The Work Forms will guide this process.

II. Rating Examples

Rating Standard Criterion Measures

All CAS standards, printed in bold type, are viewed as being essential to a sound and relevant program or service that contributes to student learning and development. Many of the statements contained in CAS standards incorporate multiple criteria that have been grouped for rating purposes. Consequently, raters may need to judge several standards statements through a single criterion measure. Using the "Ethics" standards as an example, the following illustrates how criterion measures are grouped into subcategories for rating.

Part 5. ETHICS

Suggested Evidence and Documentation:
1. Program code or statement of ethics
2. Ethics statements from relevant functional area professional associations
3. Personnel policies, procedures and/or handbook
4. Student code of conduct
5. Operating policies and procedures related to human subjects research (Institutional Review Board, IRB)
6. Minutes from meetings during which staff reviewed and discussed ethics

Criterion Measures:

DNA	IE	0	1	2	3
Does Not Apply	Insufficient Evidence/ Unable to Rate	Does Not Meet	Partly Meets	Meets	Exceeds

5.1 Ethical Standards
- Programs and services review applicable professional ethical standards and adopt or develop and implement appropriate statements of ethical practice.
- Programs and services publish and adhere to statements of ethical practice, ensure their periodic review, and orient new personnel to relevant statements of ethical practice and related institutional policies.

Rationale:

5.2 Statement of Ethical Standards
- Statements of ethical standards specify that programs and services personnel respect privacy and maintain confidentiality in communications and records as delineated by privacy laws.

Using Guidelines to Make Judgments about the Program

As discussed above, program leaders may wish to include selected CAS Guidelines to be rated along with the standards. To accomplish this, criterion measure statements must be written for the guidelines selected. The self-study team can readily create statements to be judged as part of the rating process. Programs generally considered in compliance with the standards especially can benefit by using guidelines because guidelines typically call for enhanced program quality.

Not all programs under review will incorporate guidelines to be rated as part of their self-studies. Even though the guidelines are optional for rating purposes, raters are strongly encouraged to read and review them as part of the training process. When CAS Guidelines or other criterion measures are rated, they should be treated as if they were standards.

III. Formulating an Action Plan, Preparing a Report, and Closing the Loop

The final three steps in the self-assessment process help a review team and unit plan for and take action using the information garnered through the review of documentary evidence and rating process.

Step E: Formulating an Action Plan

Typically, the assessment process will identify areas where the program is not in compliance with the standards. Action planning designed to overcome program shortcomings and provide program enhancements must then occur. Following is an outline of recommended steps for establishing a comprehensive plan of action using the CAS self-assessment work forms. Space is provided in the SAG for recording relevant information.

1) Resolve Rating Discrepancies (Work Form A)
   a) Identify criterion statements for which there is a substantial rating discrepancy.
   b) Discuss these items and come to a resolution or final decision. Note any measures where consensus could not be reached.

2) Identify Areas of Program Strength (Work Form B)
   a) Identify criterion measure ratings where strength in performance or accomplishment was noted (i.e., program exceeds criterion with a rating of 4).

3) Identify Areas for Improvement (Work Form B)
   a) Identify criterion measures where program weaknesses (i.e., program shortcomings that fail to meet criterion measures, and received a rating of 0 or 1) were noted.

4) Recommend Areas for Unit Action (Work Form C)
   a) Note items that need follow-up action for improvement and indicate what requires action.
   b) This is the last form to be completed by the review team.

5) Prepare the Action Plan (Work Form D)
   a) This step should be completed by the unit being reviewed.
   b) Use the items requiring attention listed in Work Form C to formulate a brief action plan. The focus and intended outcomes of the next steps to be taken should be identified.

6) Write Program Action Plan (Work Form E)
   a) List each specific action identified in the self-study that would enhance and strengthen services.
   b) Determine the actions needed to improve for each practice.
   c) Identify responsible parties to complete the action steps.
   d) Set dates by which specific actions are to be completed.

7) Prepare Report
   a) Prepare a comprehensive action plan for implementing program changes.
   b) Identify resources (i.e., human, fiscal, physical) that are essential to program enhancement.
   c) Set tentative start-up date for initiating a subsequent self-study.

Step F: Preparing a Report

To complete the process, a summary document should be produced that (a) explains the mission, purpose, and philosophy of the program; (b) reviews the outcome of the assessment; and (c) recommends specific plans for action.

In addition, depending on the report's audience, describe the process, evidence gathering, ratings, and evaluations, and summarize strengths and weaknesses.

Step G: Closing the Loop
Finally, to close the loop on a program's self-study process, functional area staff members must implement the recommended changes to enhance the quality of their program. In this final step, the staff endeavors to put action plans into practice. In some cases, there will be institutional politics to be navigated; continued support from functional area leaders remains essential. Staff members will want to work collectively to secure resources, identify barriers to implementation, and build stakeholder buy-in to the results. CAS recommends that closing the loop on a self-study process be integrated into regular staff meetings, individual supervision, trainings, and annual reports. A key to successfully using program review in post-secondary student services is weaving the entire process, from planning through taking action, into the fabric of the functional area, departmental, and divisional culture.

- CPSP goals address the institution's needs to maintain a safe and orderly campus, which include communicating and enforcing applicable laws and ordinances; collaborating with institutional agencies and programs to develop, disseminate, interpret, and enforce campus policies and procedures; protecting rights of students, employees, and other campus constituents in the administration of CPSP and law enforcement; responding fairly and consistently to student behavioral problems and violations of the law; facilitating and encouraging respect for the law, campus safety, and institutional governance; and initiating and encouraging educational activities that reduce violations of the law and campus regulations.

Rationale:

1.2 Mission Implementation and Review
- CPSP develops, disseminates, implements, and regularly reviews its mission.

Rationale:

1.3 Mission Statement
- The mission statement is consistent with that of the institution and with professional standards; is appropriate for student populations and community settings; and references learning and development.

Rationale:

Overview Questions:
1. How does the mission embrace student learning and development?
2. In what ways does the CPSP mission complement the mission of the institution?
3. To what extent is the mission used to guide practice?

CPSP must develop, disseminate, implement, and regularly review their missions, which must be consistent with the mission of the institution and with applicable professional standards. The mission must be appropriate for the institution's students and other constituents. Mission statements must reference student learning and development.

CPSP must develop goals that address the institution's needs to maintain a safe and orderly campus:
- communicate and enforce applicable laws and ordinances
- collaborate with appropriate institutional agencies and programs to develop, disseminate, interpret, and enforce campus policies and procedures

- respond to student behavioral problems and violations of the law in a fair and consistent manner
- facilitate and encourage respect for the law, campus safety, and institutional governance
- initiate and encourage educational activities that serve to reduce violations of the law and of campus regulations

CPSP should encourage appropriate individual and group behavior as well as serve the campus community by reducing disruption, harm, and violation of institutional policy and the law.

CPSP should be conducted in ways that will serve to foster the ethical development and personal integrity of students and promote an environment that is consistent with the overall educational goals of the institution.

- articulate how the student learning and development outcomes align with the six CAS student learning and development domains and related dimensions
- assess relevant and desirable student learning and development

- provide evidence of impact on outcomes
- articulate contributions to or support of student learning and development in the domains not specifically assessed
- use evidence gathered to create strategies for improvement of programs and services
